

Use of resins as an alternative to TDAE oil in tire tread compounds

The market demand for high-performance products requires constant research to improve the performance and safety of tires. The well-known magic triangle of tires still remains a major challenge for tire manufacturers. In this study, the use of resins as an alternative to TDAE oil in tire tread compounds was investigated in order to simultaneously optimize wet grip, wear and rolling resistance.